Vienna, August 5, N. S.

THE following Account has been publiſhed here.

Belgrade, July 25, N. S. The Marqueſs Pallavicini, General of the Imperial Ships and Veſſels on the Danube, having received Advice that 40 of the Enemy's Saicks in the Form of Gallies, were to come up to Krotzka at the ſame Time that the Vanguard of their Army was to arrive there, he fell down the River on board the Commodore-Ship the Triton, which has two Decks and was built at Vienna in 1737, and four Prames or large Gallies built at Vienna alſo this preſent Year, and arrived at Krotzka half an Hour before the ſaid Turkiſh Vanguard, conſiſting of 4000 Horſe, which drew up on the Side of a Hill towards the River. He cauſed his Veſſels to move near to the Shore, and fired 30 Cannon-ſhot at the Enemy, which did ſuch Execution upon them, as obliged them to retire precipitately over that Hill to avoid being expoſed to the Artillery of our Flotilla. The General finding he could do them no more Damage, proceeded down the River the ſame Day to meet the Saicks, having Intelligence that they were advancing; and forming a Line with his Veſſels before an Iſland at a little Diſtance from Krotzka, he propoſed by that Situation to hinder the Enemy from paſſing, and to cover the ſaid Iſland. Half an Hour after appeared the 40 Turkiſh Saicks making towards that Iſland; but ſeeing how our Veſſels were ranged, they retired to Semendria, where was the Enemy's Camp. Of all this the General gave Information to Felt-Marſhal Wallis, and ſent to him the Bailiff of Krotzka, who aſſured him that the Enemy's whole Army was on the March thither. On the 21ſt at Day-break, the Turkiſh Gallies or Saicks advanced, as though they would attack our Flotilla, but before they came within Cannon-ſhot they ſtopt; at which Time the Van of the Turkiſh Army came in View, and was followed orderly by all the reſt, with their Baggage and Artillery, and poſted themſelves at Krotzka, of which General Palavicini ſent Advice to Felt-Marſhal Wallis. The 22d in the Morning General Pallavicini deſcried two Batteries, which the Enemy had made in the Night on the Bank of the River in a Place that was covered by large Trees, and he ordered his Veſſels to fire at thoſe Batteries; but ſeeing he could do them no conſiderable Damage, he retired to a Point of the Iſland which covered his Veſſels: From that Point he had a View of the Turkiſh Land-Army formed into two Lines, and marching towards the Top of the Hills, from the Foot of which the Imperial Troops were to advance againſt them; and ſoon after he ſaw, with Regret, an Attack made, and the Enemy's Fire carried forwards, from which he obſerved that they fought with Advantage, and that our Troops could not beat them back and poſſeſs themſelves of Krotzka, according to the Reſolution which had been taken, and which had been communicated to him by Felt-Marſhal Wallis. Then General Pallavicini reſolved to retire, without giving the Enemy Time to make other Batteries, which they were actually beginning in three different Places, and which might have rendered his Return the more Difficult. When he had taken this Reſolution and was in Motion to paſs up the River, the Turkiſh Gallies advanced: One of them which expoſed it ſelf the moſt, in hopes to paſs between the Triton and the River Side, was preſently ſunk by the Cannon of that Commodore-Ship; and four others which followed that Gally, were gauled ſo by the Guns of the other Imperial Veſſels, that their Rowers fled to Land, leaving them to float with the Stream. The reſt of the Enemy's Gallies kept out of the Reach of our Cannon, and took the Opportunity of the Darkneſs of the Night to get to a Place of Security. The 23d, at Day-break, General Pallavicini with his Veſſels was before Krotzka, where he ſaw the Turkiſh Gallies lying under the Protection of the Enemy's Camp: The Triton in paſſing up the River, having loſt three Hours, by one of the Prames running foul of her Prow, was obliged to abide the Fire of five Batteries, which fired from heavy Cannon Iron-bullets of 36 Pound, and from Haubitzes Stone-Balls of 50 Pound Weight, beſides the Shot from leſſer Cannon. By the Slowneſs of making Way up the River, our Flotilla lay expoſed for Nine Hours to that Fire: And of 443 Cannon Shot, almoſt all of them were aimed at the Triton, on board of which General Pallavicini had always his Station; above 40 Shot ſtruck the Ship, but not one of them endangered her or did her any conſiderable Damage: Nor were more than three Officers on board her wounded, among them Lieutenant Colonel Count Lilliers dangerouſly in the Thigh, by a Piece of a Stone Bullet that broke in the Ship, and but three Men were killed and twelve wounded; tho' we paſſed in Sight of the whole Turkiſh Army, which by the Extent tent of Ground on which they encamped appeared to be very numerous. At Noon, ſprung up a favourable Gale of Wind, which enabled our Veſſels to uſe their Sails, and in the Evening we came up over againſt the Imperial Army; and kept coaſting by them till they entred the Lines of Belgrade. In our Paſſage we fired continually at the Turkiſh Army where we judged our Guns would bear upon them, putting as cloſe to the Shore as we could. Our Veſſels fired in all about 500 Cannon-Shot, of which the Triton alone 171. General Pallavicini was honourably received by Felt-Marſhal Wallis, who publickly declared that he was ſatisfied with his Conduct.
